Instructor Bio

Mike is a former Police Officer who was shot in the face and abdomen, stabbed seven times and left for dead by an assailant he contacted for being out of place in the patrol area. Mike recovered from his injuries and returned to work, then left RPD and is now an officer for another Washington State agency. In addition to his law enforcement and military background, Mike is a Washington State-Certified Teacher who has extensive experience in and out of the classroom, making him especially adept at reaching educators to share this crucial information. Mike speaks about the incident, critical incident effects, mental and physical preparation for critical incidents, family and media issues, aftermath and coping techniques and other critical incident-related topics. This class is absolutely critical for anyone who carries a firearm to protect themselves, the community and/or their family members. If you carry a firearm daily, it is only a matter of time before you are involved in an incident that is rapid, violent, sudden and changes your life forever. Whether it is a lethal force situation or not, the effects of a critical incident, if not prepared for ahead of time, can ruin a person for the rest of their life. Several seminars will be offered with some restricted to LE/Educator personnel only and others open to the general public. Please register appropriately depending on your status. This course is not appropriate for persons under the age of 18.
